

Art

Your Concise New York Art Guide for October 2022

Your list of must-see, fun, insightful, and very New York art events this month, including Xaviera Simmons, Cristina Iglesias, Mire Lee, and more.

by Billy Anania

Athena LaTocha: The Remains of Winter

Athena LaTocha, "Remains of Winter (Battle Hill, East)" (2022) (courtesy the artist)

When: through December 23

Where: Green-Wood Cemetery (500 25th Street, South Slope, Brooklyn)

Lakota-Ojibwe artist Athena LaTocha is exhuming what lies beneath the Brooklyn cemetery's surface in her latest installations, which are displayed atop Battle Hill and in Green-Wood's Historic Chapel. The Remains of Winter may seem like a bizarre name choice for early autumn, but it actually refers to the remnants of prehistoric glaciers that became these lands. LaTocha composed her shapely sculptures with layers of paper, lead, and steel to resemble earthen developments over millennia. A study of shifting terrains beneath our feet, LaTocha makes this place of eternal rest feel like a small blip in the land's greater history.